EDUCATION

LIVIN' TULSA
Move Your Career and Life Forward

START STRONG. KEEP THE MOMENTUM GOING.

In the Tulsa region, students can begin tuition-free technical education while they're still in high school. Eligible Tulsa County graduates can continue into two years at Tulsa Community College through the Tulsa Achieves program. Schools, colleges, and employers are working together throughout the region to connect education with real career opportunity.

Through the Oklahoma CareerTech system, students can pair their traditional high school education with hands-on technical education. At Tulsa Tech, tuition is free for public, private, and homeschooled high school students, with flexible morning, afternoon, and all-day program options available.

More Choices for How Your Child Learns

Families can choose a community and education experience that works for their family.

EARLY LEARNING:

Oklahoma has made early childhood education an important part of its education landscape, giving Tulsa-region families access to public pre-K before elementary school begins.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS:

Across the Tulsa region, families can choose among numerous public school districts serving communities of different sizes and settings.

PRIVATE EDUCATION:

Families will find a range of options across the region, including independent, faith-based, college-preparatory, and alternative learning environments.

College Can Start Early, Too

Tulsa-region education pathways include opportunities for students to begin college-level learning while completing high school. This can mean entering life after high school already moving toward a degree.

For eligible Tulsa County high school graduates with a GPA of 2.0 or higher, Tulsa Achieves provides two years of enrollment and classes at Tulsa Community College for free.
